No. 1862.— For St. George, October 25, 1924 (G.O. For 1923, Public Health).

The problem of bringing medical relief within easy reach of the rural population in the Presidency has been engaging the attention of the Government for some time. The existing facilities in this respect are extremely inadequate; roughly speaking, there is one medical institution for every 200 square miles of territory and for every 60,000 of population, the total number of medical institutions (excluding Madras City) being 714 for a population of about 42 millions; of these only a fraction are hospitals the majority being dispensaries without wards. There are only 7,255 beds provided on the whole. In Great Britain for more or less the same population, there are about 32,500 beds in 953 hospitals besides a large number of poor law infirmaries with 25,000 beds and private convalescent homes and a host of private medical practitioners with dispensaries of their own. The great mass of the village population has hitherto had no opportunity of coming into intimate daily touch with qualified doctors and has had to content itself to a great extent with the services of unqualified men. The Government feel strongly that examination of the condition of the masses is urgently called for and that immediate steps should be taken to bring qualified medical aid within comparatively easy reach of the villages.

2. The problem would admit of a very easy solution, if the Government had an unlimited supply of funds at their disposal; it would then be possible to establish and maintain a well-equipped public hospital or dispensary in almost every village or for each small rural area. Unfortunately, however, unlimited funds or even the funds required to start a sufficient number of hospitals and dispensaries on existing lines are not available at present, nor is there any likelihood of their becoming available in the near future. In the circumstances, some alternative scheme has to be devised whereby something substantial may be done at once with the funds available at least as an earnest of the Government's desire to bring medical relief within easy reach of the rural population. Three different ways of doing this have suggested themselves to the Government, namely,

- (1) the opening of a large number of Ayurvedic and Unani dispensaries;
- (2) the starting of a large number of itinerant or travelling dispensaries; and
- (3) the encouragement of private medical practitioners (Allopathic) to settle down in villages for practice by the grant of money subsidies and supply of medicines from public funds.

The first alternative, though it is likely to find favour with the public is impracticable and unworkable at present on account of the lack of a sufficient number of duly qualified and accredited practitioners of the indigenous systems of medicine. As regards the second alternative, the starting of itinerant dispensaries has been tried on a small scale but the results have not been encouraging. This method is costly and at the same time unsatisfactory. Patients cannot generally afford to wait for the periodical visit of the itinerant medical officer; he cannot generally be had when wanted and when he is present there may be nothing for him to do in the particular village. Moreover a medical man who is a permanent resident of the village will necessarily command greater confidence and be able to do more good not only in curing sick people but also in improving village sanitary conditions than an occasional travelling doctor whose visits are few and far between and whom the villagers have no opportunity to know and appreciate. This alternative also must therefore be ruled out of account as one involving a good deal of expenditure without the corresponding advantage.

3. The third alternative, namely, that of subsidising private practitioners who agree to settle down in villages appears to be the cheapest and at the same time the best from many points of view. The idea is to divert to the villages the large number of unemployed medical men who now congregate in the towns for private practice. Besides effecting efficient medical relief in rural areas, this scheme has several other advantages; it will tend also to solve the problem of unemployment to a material extent. For the present, only registered medical practitioners will be admitted to the benefits of this scheme. The subsidy to be given will be low enough to compel the medical men to exert themselves and earn the confidence of their neighbours and high enough to serve as an attraction in the initial stage until they are able to build up a practice. The grant of the subsidy will be subject to the condition that the recipients agree to settle down in specified villages and treat the necessitous poor free. They will otherwise have complete liberty to accept such fees for medical attendance and treatment as they can get. The scheme will not necessitate any expenditure on buildings or in the shape of leave allowances and pension charges since patients may be examined and medicines prescribed at the doctor's own private residence and the doctor will not be a Government servant. The scheme will also afford the best scope for the development of an independent medical profession in the country. In view of all these considerations the Government have decided to introduce the system in this Presidency as the only practicable means by which the demand for the extension of medical relief in rural tracts can adequately be met under present conditions.

4. Coming to the details, the Government consider that the amount of subsidy to be granted to medical practitioners may be fixed at Rs. 480 a year (Rs. 50 a month) in the case of medical graduates (L.M.S. and M.B.B.S.) and at Rs. 400 a year (Rs. 50-6-4 a month) in the case of practitioners with lower qualifications (L.M.P.). An additional subsidy of Rs. 100 a year will be given to such of the medical men who engage and maintain a qualified midwife in their village for affording maternity relief to the female population. A free supply of medicines to the value of Rs. 350 a year—which will be sufficient to provide drugs for a daily average of thirty out-patients—will also be given free of charge. The average cost of each village dispensary is thus not likely to exceed Rs. 1,000 a year. For the present the Government are prepared to find subsidies for about 250 new village dispensaries which will give an average of about two village dispensaries for each taluk board area. The actual working out of the scheme will be entrusted to the respective local boards; the villages will be selected by them and the medical men by their presidents. The cost of the subsidies will be met entirely by the Government and will be paid as a contribution to the local boards concerned, and they will be disbursed monthly by the presidents concerned. As regards the cost of medicines, the Government consider that local boards may reasonably be expected to meet this out of their own funds. The Government reserve to themselves the right of discontinuing the grant of subsidy in any case or cases after six months' notice or for breach of the condition that gratuitous treatment should be given to the necessitous poor. The District Medical Officers will inspect the dispensaries and submit their reports to the local boards as well as to the Government.

5. The Government trust that the scheme outlined above will meet with the warm acceptance of all local boards and that immediate steps will be taken by them to give effect to it at the earliest possible date not later than the 1st January 1925. They will be glad to be favoured with the views of all local boards on the subject, with information as to the extent to which they propose to introduce the scheme in their respective areas, the number of medical practitioners whom they propose to subsidize, the places at which they will be stationed and the dates from which the subsidies will commence. The suggestions received from the District Medical Officers of certain districts in regard to the stations to be selected are forwarded to the presidents of the respective district boards for consideration and for communication to the local boards concerned.

6. The Government share of the cost of the scheme will be met from the grant of Rs. 50,566 voted for the purpose by the Legislative Council at its meeting held on the 17th October 1924.

STATEMENT OF GROUNDS AND REASONS

In Regulation I. to Part II of the First Schedule of the Indian Ports Act, 1908 (XV of 1908), vessels are classified as either ships or steamers. In virtue of this classification, internal combustion engined motor ships may claim to be exempt from the payment of port dues. To avoid such a contingency, it is proposed to amend the definition. The opportunity has been taken also to simplify the schedule.

Dated October 1924

R. A. GRILLIAM.

Report of Select Committee, etc., to be presented to the Legislative Council of the Governor of Madras.

BILL No. 2 of 1934.

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE ON THE FILTERAGE BILL.

To

THE HONOURABLE THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR OF MADRAS.

We, the members of the Select Committee appointed to consider the Bill to amend the Criminal Law in force in the Presidency of Madras (Bill No. 2 of 1934), have the honour to submit the following report.

2. The Bill was published in the Port St. George Gazette in English on the 14th February 1934, in Tamil, Telugu, Malayalam, Kannara and Hindustani on the 19th February 1934, and in Oriya on the 26th February 1934.

3. The Committee met at 12 noon on Saturday the 7th September and the members present were (1) the Hon'ble Mr. C. P. Ramaswami Aiyar, (2) Dr. John Mathai, (3) Mr. J. D. Samuel, (4) Dewan Bahadur M. Krishnan Nayar, (5) Mr. Chopala Menon, (6) Sir James Simpson, (7) Mr. Abbot A.C., and (8) the Advocate-General.

4. As the Bill reverses, owing to the obvious acquiescence of the case, the usual onus of proof on the prosecution, which is considered to be a basic principle of British criminal jurisprudence, the Committee decided to provide all possible safeguards against misuse of its provisions.

5. It was agreed that the notification by which the provisions of the Act are to be extended to specified articles and areas must be placed on the table of the House in order to give the members an opportunity for criticism.

6. It was also agreed that any vexatious prosecution without any reasonable or probable cause should be made punishable as an offence. A new clause has been added for this purpose.

7. These two safeguards did not seem sufficient to some members of the Committee and by a majority the Committee added a third safeguard that the provisions of section 3 should be confined to possession of the notified articles within the notified areas, possession outside such areas being left to the operation of the ordinary criminal law.

8. The other alterations which are more or less verbal and involve no great principle will be seen at a glance as the alterations and additions are printed in the clarendon type.

9. Divan Bahadur M. Krishnan Nayar who assisted in framing safeguards against the misuse of the provisions of the Act wishes it to be understood that his participation in the work of devising safeguards should not be taken to imply acceptance of the principle of the Bill. Giving the fullest recognition to the necessities of the case, he said he was still, on mature consideration, averse to the Bill as subversive of the well-recognized first principle of British criminal administration.

10. The Committee decided to republish the Bill having regard to the changes made in its provisions.
